HAMILTON'S UNIVERSAL TUNE-BOOK;

A COLLECTION OF THE
MELODIES OF ALL NATIONS,

ADAPTED FOR VIOLIN, FLUTE, CLARINET, ETC.

EDITED BY JAMES MANSON.

Not harsh and crabbed, . . . . .
But musical as is Apollo's lute,
And a perpetual feast of nectar'd sweets,
Where no crude surfeit reigns.—COMUS.

HAMILTON'S UNIVERSAL TUNE-BOOK.

---

THE habit of talking over our success, prospects, and intentions, with our friends, has so many pleasing associations connected with it, that we cannot allow the opportunity afforded by the completion of the First Volume of the UNIVERSAL TUNE-BOOK to pass without saying a few words to those who are subscribers to the work.

There are several features new and peculiar to the UNIVERSAL TUNE-BOOK; but that which chiefly distinguishes it from the innumerable collections which have been made from the time of the "Aberdeen Cantus," and "Playford's Dancing Master," to the present time, is its wonderful cheapness, and the care which has been exercised in its production, both as regards the selecting always the best sets of the melodies, and watching that they should be correctly printed.

Hitherto in such collections of music as have been available to the industrious classes, it has been the custom to publish books of airs without the names of the composers, until it has now become unfortunately impossible to trace the history of by far the greatest number of the popular melodies. In the UNIVERSAL TUNE-BOOK we have invariably placed the composer's name, or the country to which it properly belonged, to the tune, when it could be ascertained.

We have also introduced the name or first line of the most popular song which is sung to the air, by which means the work gains additional value, as those who are in possession of books of songs unaccompanied with music, have here what they require—a companion book containing music for the oldest and many of the newest songs.

In several instances where the composer's name, or the country to which an air belonged, has been accidentally omitted in the body of the work, or has been ascertained since it was printed, it has been given in the index, and in cases where we had any further particulars to add regarding any air, such as the time when it was published, or in what collection it appears for the first time, or the like, and which was too long to be introduced between the staves of music, these memoranda have been appended in the form of notes to the Index.

Such are the more marked novelties of our Tune-book when compared with other cheap collections.

As it is our wish to make the UNIVERSAL TUNE-BOOK a complete repository of all the popular English, Irish, and Scottish melodies, we would here remark that our friends would render us an important service if they would note down and transmit to us any airs, or fragments of airs, which are common to the particular district in which they are located. Hundreds of such are still to be collected, and in the places where these unwritten tunes do most abound their very number and commonness is the chief reason why they are still unpublished. Some persons who read this will probably say, "why these are so common that they must be known all over the country," but it is not so; many are common to the border which are not known in the midland counties, and many are peculiar to Ayrshire which are unknown in the Lothians. Although these floating tunes may be held of little comparative value by those who hear or who sing them almost every day of their lives, nevertheless they are invaluable in any large collection such as ours is meant to be. The tunes of a country ought to be preserved, and for a reason seldom thought of. The melodies of one nation are, as easily recognised, are as distinguishable from those of another, and are as characteristic of a people as are their songs and proverbs. They have as much the impress of nationality upon them. And thus, though they appear of less importance than the ballad literature, still they assist in solving the problem, and tracing the origin of the individualism, if we may so speak, which is stamped upon the manners and habits of a nation, and which is observable even in different counties and parishes of the same nation. We have received several valuable contributions of this sort, and beg for these to tender our grateful thanks, and to solicit a continuation of such favours.

Any of our subscribers who can furnish us with additional information concerning the authorship or history of any of the airs contained in this volume, or that is interesting and in connection with any air we may hereafter publish, are invited to correspond with us, their communications will be welcomed with gratitude, and made use of in our succeeding volumes, but it is desirable that such notices be accompanied with the name and address of the writer, and such references to books, or other authorities, as may establish their authenticity.

The pages of the UNIVERSAL TUNE-BOOK have been enriched by original airs from many parts of Great Britain, even from Truro to Thurso, some of which are the composition of men of known repute, requiring no praise of ours, but hearty thanks; and others showing both taste and talent. To those who are young or amateur composers, while we acknowledge the favour, we would say write on—write fearlessly—but be careful to see whether the musical idea you have committed to paper be really original, and not a silly travesty, or palpable plagiarism, as some we have received are. Even while inditing the last sentence, in came the post-boy bearing a packet containing what were called original airs. One of these was the popular air “We Met,” served up in 3-8th time, with a very slight alteration of the second measure. This surely could not be intentional, but, to say the least of it, it was not very ingenuous.

But we must not part from our friends with a frown of displeasure or a harsh word. We are proud of the success of our Fourpenny Tune-Book; and we have to express how deeply grateful we are for the support we have received. We are determined to put good and cheap music into the hands of our subscribers as the best return we can make for their kindness. Varied and excellent as is the contents of our first volume, our second will be still more so. We are enabled to intermingle tunes really of all nations, which we shall be able to prove, if life, health, and encouragement be continued to us, until our work forms a chain of volumes, rich

“ In notes, with many a winding bout
Of linked sweetness long drawn out.”

NOTES.

1 This tune appears in "Thomson's Orpheus Caledonius," anno 1725.

2 This air appears in both M'Gibbon and Oswald's collections of old Scottish melodies.

3 This tune is as old at least as 1724; and afterwards in the stirring times of Jacobite rebellion was a favourite air with that party favourable to the re-establishment of the Stuart dynasty.

4 Blar Leine, or the shirt battle, fought at Kinloch Lochy, between the Frazers of Lovat and the MacDonalds of Clan Ronald, and so called from the contending parties having stripped to their shirts.

5 This tune appears in the Skene M.S. under the title "Adew Dundee."

6 This tune is in "Oswald's Pocket Companion."

7 This tune is very old, as it is in a collection of old tunes published by Adam Craig, who was one of the principal violin players at the concert held in Edinburgh, on St. Cecilia's day, the 22d of Nov., 1695.

8 This air is attributed to James Oswald.

9 The old name is "Clunie's Reel;" the old tune "Mary Scott" was known at least a century before it was known as "Carrack's Rant."

10 This tune is in "Oswald's Companion."

11 This tune appears in "Playford's Dancing Master," 1657.

12 This is an adorned set of the melody "Dry your tears," which will be found at page 54 of the Tune-Book; although Captain Frazer claims it as Scottish, we are inclined to believe that it is Irish, and the same with "Cean dhu Dhelish," which we will insert at a future opportunity.

13 From the "Vocal Magazine," Edin. 1797.

14 This tune is inserted in "Oswald's Pocket Companion."

15 The Fourteenth of October, or St. Crispin's day; this tune is as old as 1725.

16 This tune is at least as old as the time of Queen Mary. Patie's song in "The Gentle Shepherd," beginning "Dear Roger if your Jenny geek," is sung to this air.

17 This tune is the composition of General Reid, the founder of the Chair of Music in the University of Edinburgh, and was first named "The Highland, or 42d Regiment's March."

18 This air, with its song "Up with the Carles of Dysart," never appeared in any collection before "Johnson's Musical Museum."

19 This air is a slightly altered set of the leading part of the glee "Let ambition fire thy mind," composed by John Weldon (1699).

20 This air is in "Oswald's Pocket Companion."

21 This melody appears in "Oswald's Collection."

22 This air appears in Mrs. Crockat's M.S., 1709.

23 This tune is sometimes called simply "The Gipsy Laddie." The song beginning "A wee bird came to our ha' door," is sung to it.

24 Translation, "Hymn to the Saviour;" in Campbell's "Albyn's Anthology" this tune is called "The Aelegan."

25 This melody appears in the Aberdeen Cantus, 1662.

26 This is a border melody of old date; it consisted of only one strain originally, but it appears with a second part about the year 1709.

27 The proper name of this air is "The Moreen."

28 This air appears in the "Orpheus Caledonius," 1725.

29 This air appears in the "Orpheus Caledonius," 1725.

30 This tune appears in "Oswald's Pocket Companion."

31 This tune must be at least upwards of two hundred years old.

32 This is a modern set of "My Apron Dearie," vide page 92.

33 Old air, nameless, about 1780.

34 This air is in Mrs. Crockat's book, 1709.

35 This air is attributed to Jean Jacques Rousseau. Dr. Arne introduced it into his opera of "Midas," and it has since passed as his.

36 This tune appears in "Oswald's Pocket Companion."

37 This tune is also known by the name "Haste to the Wedding."

38 This air is in "Playford's Choice Ayres and Songs," anno 1683, but is probably much older.

39 This air, with the song "Hey the bonnie breast-knots," was sent by an anonymous correspondent to the editor of "Johnson's Musical Museum," in which work it first appeared. Circa 1789.

40 This air appears in "Oswald's Pocket Companion."

41 This set of the old air was introduced by Mr. P. Urbani at the concerts in Edinburgh. He died in Ireland in 1816.

42 This melody appears in a M.S. collection transcribed by Thomas Wode, anno 1566, and in a still more ancient church music book; it is at least as old as the time of Mary, Queen of Scots.

43 This melody was composed by John Bruce, a fiddle player in Dumfries, about the year 1750.

44 This melody appears in Mrs. Crockat's music book, written in 1709, but it is probably much older.

WALTZ FROM THE OVERTURE TO "LODOISKA."

The musical score for the waltz is written for a single melodic line on a treble clef staff. It begins in 3/4 time with a key signature of one sharp (F#). The piece is marked with a forte f dynamic and includes a Dolce. (Dolce) section. The score is divided into several measures, with some measures marked with a forte fz dynamic. A note at the end of the piece indicates that it can be played an octave higher at pleasure. The score includes first and second endings, marked "1st." and "2d.", and concludes with a double bar line.

The page contains ten staves of musical notation in treble clef. The notation includes various musical symbols such as notes, rests, and dynamic markings. The first staff begins with a treble clef and a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The music is written in a style typical of 19th-century sheet music, with many beamed notes and slurs. The following staves continue the musical piece, with some staves featuring dynamic markings such as Spa (Sforzando) and luc. (Luce). The notation is dense, with many notes and rests, and the overall style is characteristic of the Hamilton's Universal Tune-Book.
